The secret to successful gambling is guessing the state of the session and betting accordingly. In other words, if the session is alternating, bet against the winning streak, if it is consecutive, bet with it. Think of the session like the sea - sometimes the water's smooth, sometimes it's choppy.

Winning and losing streaks - how to recognise them.

The longest expected losing streak (or winning streak) can be calculated using the following formula: $n = \text{number of trials (i.e. total number of bets)}$ $\ln = \text{natural logarithm}$ $1/P = \text{probability}$ $2 | .. | = \text{absolute value or 'modulus'}$ 1 Suffice to say, explaining what natural logarithm is would be worthy of a series of articles. For the time being, use Excel to calculate this for you.

The Science of Calculating Winning and Losing Streaks

A streak is when you win a certain amount of bets in a row, with no losses in between. For example, to win £100,000 you must have a streak of 30 winning bets. This means all winning bets must be won consecutively, any losses means you will have to start your streak again. What Does the Market Column Show?
