 Adding the grip rating to the label ensures tyre manufacturers don't compromise grip in order to get a good energy rating. The rating is based on wet braking in a straight line. In reality, braking distances also depend on a host of additional factors, but industry analysts have estimated that using grade A tyres over grade G ones can result in a 30% shorter stopping distance.

 The difference between an IP rating and an IPX rating is more straightforward than you might think: in fact, 'IPX' is not entirely valid as a separate IP code in and of itself. Ratings that feature an 'X' somewhere in the code simply denote that a numerical rating has only been provided for one of the two main ingress types (foreign body or moisture), but not for the other.
