"During war, you yearn for the familiar," says Shadmi's Serling. "It's all you dream about: the food, the family, the women. But once it's all over, and you're back home, there's nothing waiting for you. Nothing but a great wide emptiness." Emptiness was the theme of the first episode of Twilight Zone, broadcast on October 2, 1959. "Where Is Everybody?" begins with a man walking into a town that has the desolate stillness of an Edward Hopper streetscape.
