Not really about "East Asian Development" in general but mostly just Korean development experience.

Nevertheless, it is a clear, brief, easy-to-read account. I could not say I completely agree with everything, but overall it of East Asia and draws lessons for Sub-Saharan Africa in building global competitiveness. It starts with a historical perspective of both regions' developmental trajectories. This is followed by an analysis of the causes of East Asia's superior economic performance and development and SSA underdevelopment.
